Welcome to the Cambridge Africa Spring Newsletter

This issue kicks off our spring newsletter. It's a little more casual than the previous issues, focusing on personal reflections rather than reports.

We hope you enjoy reading about our summer school workshops, PhD showcase, the Impact of Cancer on the African continent, and the growing number of collaborations between Cambridge researchers and African scientists.

Finally, we look forward to sharing more updates on CAPREx and our collaborations in the future.

---

African Researchers: Cambridge University is supporting two young Ugandan researchers to attend a research Summer School this year. We are also looking to fund two other researchers to participate in oncology electives in September. These two researchers will be funded by Cambridge-Africa and are expected to reflect on the highly successful CAPREx programme and its impact.

---

African Researchers: Cambridge University is supporting two young Ugandan researchers to attend a research Summer School this year. We are also looking to fund two other researchers to participate in oncology electives in September. These two researchers will be funded by Cambridge-Africa and are expected to reflect on the highly successful CAPREx programme and its impact.

---

African Researchers: Cambridge University is supporting two young Ugandan researchers to attend a research Summer School this year. We are also looking to fund two other researchers to participate in oncology electives in September. These two researchers will be funded by Cambridge-Africa and are expected to reflect on the highly successful CAPREx programme and its impact.

---

African Researchers: Cambridge University is supporting two young Ugandan researchers to attend a research Summer School this year. We are also looking to fund two other researchers to participate in oncology electives in September. These two researchers will be funded by Cambridge-Africa and are expected to reflect on the highly successful CAPREx programme and its impact.

---

African Researchers: Cambridge University is supporting two young Ugandan researchers to attend a research Summer School this year. We are also looking to fund two other researchers to participate in oncology electives in September. These two researchers will be funded by Cambridge-Africa and are expected to reflect on the highly successful CAPREx programme and its impact.